Preliminary and unaudited revenue for fourth quarter 2017 is expected to be $15.5 million, or approximately 17% growth compared to the same period in 2016. Cogentix Medical also expects similar top line growth in fiscal year 2018 as it achieved in the fourth quarter of 2017.

Cogentix has previously tapped into this wealth of expertise through its $2 million investment in Vensica, and the new R&D center will further enable the company to access exceptional engineers and innovators in an ecosystem with a track record of successful innovation.

"Our revenue in the fourth quarter of 2017 was by far the highest quarterly revenue achieved in the history of the company. Both our fourth quarter and full year 2017 top line results demonstrate the continued growth of our urology and uro-gynecology product lines, and we believe there are continued significant growth opportunities in these large and expanding markets," said Darin Hammers, President and CEO of Cogentix Medical. "Our strong top line performance, combined with an increased focus on innovation and our continued business development efforts, enhance our ability to become a leading consolidator of innovative products and technologies that can provide benefit to patients, physicians and care centers in the urology arena."
